About the Speaker:

James W. Wagner, Ph.D., an award-winning teacher and scientist, became the nineteenth president of Emory University on September 1, 2003. Dr. Wagner earned his bachelor's degree in electrical engineering in 1975 from the University of Delaware and a master's degree in clinical engineering in 1978 from The Johns Hopkins University School of Medicine. In 1984, he completed his Ph.D. degree in materials science and engineering from Johns Hopkins. Following a distinguished tenure on the faculty of Johns Hopkins, Dr. Wagner served as dean, provost, and interim president of Case Western Reserve University. He has authored more than 115 publications. While at Emory, he has been able to forge collaborations among a diverse array of schools and programs, ranging from the arts and sciences to the professional schools. In 2009, he was appointed by President Obama to serve as Vice-Chair of the Presidential Commission for the Study of Bioethical Issues.
